COLUMBIA, S.C. – Inmate Jordan Russell Wall, 27, pleaded guilty today to his part in the 2018 violence at Lee Correctional Institution that left seven inmates dead and more than 20 injured.

Wall, who began serving a 30-year sentence for murder in 2015, pleaded guilty to:

- Three counts of assault and battery by mob first degree. He was sentenced to 30 years on each count.
- Assault and battery first degree, sentenced to 30 years.
- Assault and battery by mob second degree, sentenced to 20 years.
- Criminal conspiracy, sentenced to five years.

Wall's new sentences will run concurrently with his previous sentence. The new time will extend his projected release date to about 2050.

Prosecutors Margaret Scott and Barney Giese told Circuit Judge Ferrell Cothran that Wall was an integral part of the violence that erupted in dorm F5 at the Bishopville prison April 15, 2018. Wall is a member of the Gangster Disciples, which joined together with the Crips to attack the Bloods during the violence that night. He and others gathered Blood gang members, marched them outside their housing unit and stabbed them multiple times. Three of these inmates died – Raymond Scott, Corey Scott and Joshua Jenkins.

This is part of a large-scale ongoing prosecution of inmates responsible for the violence at Lee CI that night.

"These inmates who were killed and injured are victims, and their families deserve justice," SCDC Director Bryan Stirling said. "I am glad this man has been held accountable for his part in this violent night."
